Part One: Explanation, and context, of the Instrument

4. Overview of the Instrument

What does the legislation do?

4.1 The instrument brings into effect a Convention and Protocol (the "2025 Arrangements") agreed by the United Kingdom and Peru. The 2025 Arrangements are a Double Taxation Convention (DTC) for the avoidance of double taxation on income and gains from cross-border activity.

Where does the legislation extend to, and apply?

4.2 The extent of this instrument (that is, the jurisdiction(s) which the instrument forms part of the law of) is the United Kingdom.

4.3 The territorial application of this instrument (that is, where the instrument produces a practical effect) is the United Kingdom.

5. Policy Context

What is being done and why?

5.1 The purpose of DTCs is to prevent income or gains being taxed both in the territory in which they arise and the territory in which the recipient is resident. They do this either by allocating an exclusive right to tax the income or gain to one of the territories, or by providing that one territory must give relief for the tax charged in the other territory in respect of the same income or gain. DTCs also provide additional protection for taxpayers by including specific measures that combat discriminatory tax treatment. More generally, DTCs benefit taxpayers by ensuring certainty of treatment and, as far as possible, by reducing compliance burdens.

5.2 Like all of the United Kingdom's more recent DTCs, the 2025 Arrangements largely follow the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development's (OECD) latest Model Tax Convention on Income and on Capital (OECD Model). In doing so, they encourage and maintain international consensus on the appropriate tax treatment of cross-border economic activity, promoting international trade and investment.

5.3 DTCs also protect the Exchequer by including provisions to combat tax avoidance. For example, measures providing for the exchange of information between revenue authorities make it more difficult for residents of both territories to evade taxation by concealing assets offshore.

5.4 The 2025 Arrangements include the minimum standards recommended by the OECD/G20 Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (BEPS) project. The BEPS project created a single set of consensus-based international tax rules to protect against tax avoidance while offering increased certainty and predictability to taxpayers. These provisions are now included in the 2017 version of the OECD Model.

What was the previous policy, how is this different?

5.5 There was not previously a DTC between the United Kingdom and Peru. This instrument gives effect in the United Kingdom to the provisions of the new DTC.

5.6 The following paragraphs in this section explain the provisions of the 2025 Arrangements including the reasons for material departures from the OECD Model.

Title and preamble

5.7 The title and preamble of the 2025 Arrangements follow the latest OECD Model. The change to the OECD Model arose from the BEPS Action 6 Report on preventing the granting of treaty benefits in inappropriate circumstances. The statement in the preamble that the territories intend to avoid creating opportunities for non-taxation or reduced taxation through tax evasion or avoidance, including through treaty shopping arrangements, is one of the elements of the minimum standard on preventing treaty abuse agreed under the BEPS project.

Article 1 (Persons covered)

5.8 Article 1 sets out the general scope of the 2025 Arrangements. The 2025 Arrangements include two provisions from the OECD Model that were introduced following the BEPS project. The first concerns the treatment of income or gains derived through fiscally transparent entities such as partnerships. This provision confirms that the benefits of the 2025 Arrangements are only due where such income is effectively taxed in the hands of a resident of one of the territories. Sub-paragraph (2)(b) contains an additional stipulation required by Peru, in that the fiscally transparent entity must either be formed and governed under the laws of the United Kingdom or Peru, or in a third territory which has comprehensive exchange of information provisions with the territory in which the relevant income arose.

5.9 The second provision clarifies that the 2025 Arrangements do not prevent a territory from taxing its own residents except where it explicitly provides otherwise. This puts beyond doubt that the provisions of a DTC cannot be used to circumvent anti-avoidance rules in a territory's domestic tax law.

Article 2 (Taxes covered)

5.10 Article 2 lists the taxes to which the 2025 Arrangements are to apply. The existing United Kingdom taxes to which the 2025 Arrangements will apply are income tax, corporation tax and capital gains tax. The existing Peru taxes to which the Arrangements will apply are Ley del Impuesto a la Renta (Income taxes imposed under the Income Tax Act) and Decreto Legislativo que crea el Régimen MYPE Tributario del Impuesto a la Renta (Legislative decree that creates the Micro and Small Businesses Income Tax Regime).

Article 3 (General Definitions)

5.11 Article 3 defines a number of terms used in the 2025 Arrangements and provides a rule for determining the meaning of terms not defined. In particular, the 2025 Arrangements include a definition of a "recognised pension fund", relevant to Articles 4, 10, 11 and 18, to ensure that schemes not treated as a separate person fall within the definition. The United Kingdom also uses a definition of "national" that differs from the OECD Model in order to reflect more accurately the provisions of its domestic law.

Article 4 (Resident)

5.12 Article 4 establishes the meaning of "resident of a Contracting State" and lays down detailed rules for resolving cases where individuals or other persons may be considered residents of both territories for tax purposes under their domestic laws. Unlike the OECD Model, the provisions of paragraph 1 include reference to "place of incorporation" as this condition establishes company residence under the domestic laws of the United Kingdom and Peru.

5.13 Sub-paragraph 2(a) also confirms that a recognised pension fund that is established in either territory will be considered to be a resident. Sub-paragraph 2(b) does not have an equivalent in the OECD Model but reflects the United Kingdom's preference for confirming that certain non-profit organisations will enjoy the benefits of the 2025 Arrangements even if they are generally exempt from taxation.

5.14 Paragraph 4 provides a tiebreaker for persons other than individuals which are resident in both territories under paragraph 1 of the Article. Under the 2025 Arrangements the competent authorities will determine the residence status of such persons by mutual agreement. This uses the wording introduced to the OECD Model following the BEPS project and prevents companies manipulating their tax residence for tax avoidance purposes.

Article 5 (Permanent establishment)

5.15 Article 5 defines the term "permanent establishment" (PE) for the purposes of the 2025 Arrangements. Taken together with Article 7, it describes the circumstances and manner in which enterprises of one territory may be taxed on their business profits arising in the other.

5.16 It has a wider scope than the OECD Model, reflecting Peru's preference. In particular, it has a lower threshold of more than six months for a building site to give rise to a PE. It also deems there to be a PE where services are provided by an enterprise in the other territory for more than 183 days in total in a 12-month period.

5.17 Paragraph 4 provides an exception where an enterprise undertakes activities that are considered to be preparatory or auxiliary in nature. This follows the formulation in the 2017 OECD Model. The United Kingdom prefers and has previously always used the formulation provided in the 2014 OECD Model as HMRC believe its operation is clearer in terms of United Kingdom domestic law, however the use of the newer model wording was a requirement for Peru. Paragraph 4 of the protocol to the convention is designed to clarify the operation of this provision in respect of United Kingdom domestic law.

5.18 The Article includes in paragraph 5 a rule recommended by the BEPS project that prevents companies from fragmenting their activities in order to avoid the PE threshold.

Article 6 (Income from immovable property)

5.19 Article 6 allows the territory in which the property is situated to tax income from immovable property. It also defines immovable property. The Article materially replicates the equivalent provisions of the OECD Model.

Article 7 (Business profits)

5.20 Article 7 provides that unless an enterprise of one territory carries on business in the other through a PE situated there, its profits will be taxable only in its territory of residence. Where the enterprise has a PE in the other territory, that territory will be entitled to tax profits attributable to the PE. The provisions of this Article follow the relevant applicable provisions in the pre-2010 OECD Model, which continues to be the preference of many states, including Peru.

Article 8 (International shipping and air transport)

5.21 Article 8 governs the taxation of shipping and air transport operated in international traffic. It follows the OECD Model in providing that profits of an enterprise of one territory from the operation of ships or aircraft in international traffic shall be taxable only in that territory. In line with United Kingdom preferences, the provision also clarifies that certain incidental income will be included in profits from the operation of ships and aircraft in international traffic. In line with Peru's preference, interest on funds directly connected with international shipping and air transport is also included in profits from the operation of ships and aircraft in international traffic.

Article 9 (Associated enterprises)

5.22 Article 9 governs the evaluation for tax purposes of transfers of goods, services, finance and intangible property between associated enterprises. It is based on the "arm's length" principle, which requires such transfers to be evaluated as if they had taken place between independent enterprises.

5.23 Where an adjustment is made to the profits of an enterprise by one territory, the other territory will make an appropriate corresponding adjustment to the amount of tax charged on those profits, in order to relieve the double taxation which might otherwise arise as a result of an adjustment by only one territory.

Article 10 (Dividends)

5.24 Article 10 contains the rules for the taxation of dividends paid by a company that is a resident of one territory to a resident of the other territory. It allows the territory where the company paying the dividend is resident to tax the dividend but where the beneficial owner of the dividend is resident in the other territory the rate of tax is limited to 10% of the gross amount of the dividend by sub-paragraph 2(a). However, in line with United Kingdom preferences, sub-paragraph 2(b) allows for a rate of 15% when the entity paying the dividend is a Real Estate Investment Trust. This protects the United Kingdom's ability to tax income derived from UK property when investors invest through a Real Estate Investment Trust.

5.25 Paragraph 6 allows for a 'branch profits tax' at a maximum rate of 10%, which is imposed on the profits of a permanent establishment after ordinary tax is deducted by the territory of the permanent establishment. This was a requirement of Peru, and the wording is based on the commentary to Article 10 in the United Nations Model Tax Convention.

Article 11 (Interest)

5.26 Article 11 contains the rules for the taxation of interest arising in one territory and paid to a resident of the other territory. It provides that a territory may tax interest arising there but where the interest is beneficially owned by a resident of the other territory the rate of tax is limited generally to 10% except where it is paid or received by the other state, a political subdivision or the central banks, in which case it is exempt from tax. Interest paid between the two contracting states in respect of loans guaranteed or insured by the contracting states or their political subdivisions or central banks is also exempt.

5.27 The definition of interest departs from the OECD Model to reflect the United Kingdom's preference for clarifying that the Article does not apply to amounts that are within the definition of a dividend in Article 10.

5.28 Unlike the OECD Model, the "special relationship" provision at paragraph 6 applies where the amount of interest paid is excessive "for whatever reason". This permits the territories to take into account both the rate of the interest and the amount of the debt in determining whether interest paid is excessive. In other respects, the Article largely follows the OECD Model.

Article 12 (Royalties)

5.29 Article 12 contains the rules for the taxation of royalties paid by a resident of one territory to a resident of the other territory. In line with Peru's preferences, it provides that the territory where royalties arise may tax the royalties but where the royalties are beneficially owned by a resident of the other territory, the rate of tax that may be charged is limited to 15%.

5.30 The definition of royalties extends to payments for the right to use equipment (leasing), and so is wider in scope than the OECD wording. Unlike the OECD Model, the "special relationship" provision at paragraph 6 applies where the amount of royalties paid are excessive "for whatever reason". This allows the territories to consider all factors in determining whether royalties paid are excessive.

Article 13 (Capital gains)

5.31 Article 13 contains the rules for the taxation of gains deriving from the alienation of property situated in one territory by a resident of the other. It materially replicates the equivalent provisions of the OECD Model, however paragraph 5 allows a state to tax the sale of shares in its resident companies if a seller resident in the other state owned more than 20% of the shares in the company in the year preceding the sale. This is Peru's preference and follows the UN Model Tax Convention.

Article 14 (Independent personal services)

5.32 Article 14 contains the rules for the taxation of income derived from individuals resident in one territory performing professional and other independent services in the other territory. It provides two separate tests of when such income may be taxed in the territory where the services are performed. First, where the individual provides services through a fixed base, which in practice is the same as the test in Article 5 of whether there is a permanent establishment. Second, where the individual is present in the territory for at least 183 days in any twelve-month period. It follows the United Nations Model Tax Convention and has been included to reflect Peru's preference.

Article 15 (Income from employment)

5.33 Article 15 contains the rules for the taxation of employment income and follows the OECD Model.

Article 16 (Directors' fees)

5.34 Article 16 follows the OECD Model and provides that directors' fees may be taxed in the territory of which the company paying them is a resident.

Article 17 (Entertainers and sportspersons)

5.35 Article 17 contains the rules for the taxation of income derived from personal activities as an entertainer or sportsperson and materially follows the OECD Model.

Article 18 (Pensions)

5.36 Article 18 contains the rules for the taxation of pensions. It provides that all pensions, other than those in respect of government service, are taxable only in the territory where the recipient is resident.

Article 19 (Government services)

5.37 Article 19 contains rules for the taxation of remuneration paid to an individual in respect of government service, including pensions. The general rule is that the remuneration is only taxable in the territory to which the services are rendered, in line with the OECD Model. However, there is an exception for remuneration, other than pensions and other similar remuneration, paid to locally engaged staff. Such remuneration is taxable only in the territory where the individual is resident, provided that the individual is subject to tax there.

Article 20 (Students)

5.38 Article 20 contains the rules which govern the taxation of visiting students and business apprentices. Its provisions follow the OECD Model.

Article 21 (Other income)

5.39 Article 21 contains the rules for the taxation of income not dealt with elsewhere in the 2025 Arrangements. This broadly follows the provisions of the UN Model Tax Convention in line with Peru's preference, and allows for both states to tax 'other income', unless it is effectively connected with a permanent establishment or fixed base in one of the contracting states. Paragraph 4 includes a "special relationship" provision similar to that found in Articles 11 and 12.

Article 22 (Elimination of double taxation)

5.40 Article 22 sets out the methods by which each territory will relieve double taxation and is broadly based on the equivalent article in the OECD Model, modified to reflect each territory's domestic double taxation relief rules. Paragraph 1 sets out the provision applying to Peru and provides for relief by way of credit for United Kingdom tax paid, including underlying tax on the profits out of which dividends are paid from the United Kingdom to Peru. Paragraph 2 details the corresponding provisions that apply in the United Kingdom, which generally provide for relief by way of credit, but also include provisions that exempt dividends and the profits of PEs from tax in line with domestic law.

5.41 Paragraphs 3 and 4 determine which territory is obliged to provide credit relief in the unusual situation where both territories can tax a resident on the income, profits or gains. Paragraph 3 removes the obligation for Peru to provide relief for United Kingdom tax where the income in question is taxable in the United Kingdom solely because it is income of a resident of the United Kingdom and paragraph 4 is an equivalent provision relating to relief for Peruvian tax.

Article 23 (Non-discrimination)

5.42 Article 23 provides that, subject to certain conditions, neither territory shall impose discriminatory taxes or connected requirements on the nationals, PEs and enterprises of the other. In line with United Kingdom preferences, paragraph 5 deals separately with personal allowances granted to residents and nationals, confirming that the Article does not require these to be granted to such persons where they are not resident in the territory in question. The Article omits the OECD Model paragraph 6, which extends the application to taxes of every kind and description – therefore its scope is limited to the taxes described in Article 2 in line with UK preference.

Article 24 (Mutual agreement procedure)

5.43 Article 24 establishes a procedure for resolving difficulties arising from the interpretation or application of the 2025 Arrangements. This follows the UN Model for the Mutual Agreement Procedure (Alternative A) as is Peru's preference. This provides that taxpayers wishing to use the Mutual Agreement Procedure must make an application to the state of which they are a resident, and there is no provision for binding arbitration.

Article 25 (Exchange of information)

5.44 Article 25 follows the latest OECD Model and provides for the exchange of certain information between the competent authorities of the two territories in compliance with international standards.

Article 26 (Assistance in the collection of taxes)

5.45 Article 26 provides for the mutual assistance in the collection of tax debts between the United Kingdom and Peru. It largely follows the OECD Model provisions and applies to all types of taxes, not just those covered by the 2025 Arrangements, except any that are imposed contrary to generally accepted taxation principles.

Article 27 (Members of diplomatic missions and consular posts)

5.46 Article 27 ensures that diplomatic or consular officials shall not receive less favourable treatment under the 2025 Arrangements than they are entitled to under international law or under the provisions of special agreements (such as the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations). The Article follows the OECD Model.

Article 28 (Entitlement to benefits)

5.47 Article 28 is an anti-abuse rule. It includes "the principal purpose test" (PPT) which denies treaty benefits to a person who seeks to take advantage of the provisions of the 2025 Arrangements to secure a result which is contrary to their object and purpose. The PPT is one of the elements of the minimum standard on preventing treaty abuse agreed under Action 6 of the BEPS project.

Article 29 (Entry into force)

5.48 Article 29 contains the provisions governing how and when the 2025 Arrangements will enter into force and take effect.

Article 30 (Termination)

5.49 Article 30 contains the provisions that govern how the 2025 Arrangements can be terminated and how that termination has effect.

Protocol

5.50 The Protocol contains clarificatory and additional material relating to the Articles above and forms an integral part of the 2025 Arrangements.

5.51 Paragraph 1 of the protocol makes clear that a domestic law of a contracting state designed to prevent the avoidance or evasion of taxes is not affected in anyway by the 2025 Arrangements, so long as that law is in accordance with the object and purpose of the 2025 Arrangements. This was inserted at the request of Peru.

5.52 Paragraph 2 clarifies that Peruvian estates in the course of administration and matrimonial partnerships are considered to be 'persons' in accordance with Article 3 sub-paragraph 1d).

5.53 Paragraph 3 clarifies the legal basis for entities to be considered "recognised pension funds" in both Peru and the United Kingdom. It also allows for the Competent Authorities to agree additions to this list when new statutes introduce entities of an identical or substantially similar nature.

5.54 Paragraph 4 clarifies the meaning of "plays the principal role" in paragraph 4 of Article 5, and further clarifies that conclusion of contracts by a person must take place repeatedly to result in the creation of a dependent agent permanent establishment under paragraph 6 of Article 5. It also stipulates that promotion and marketing activities that do not result directly in the conclusion of a contract are not activities that will result in the creation of such a permanent establishment. This is a requirement for the United Kingdom.

5.55 Paragraph 5 stipulates that in financial trades, an intermediary will generally be considered to be acting independently unless they act exclusively or almost exclusively for an enterprise to which they are closely related. Such independent intermediaries should not create a dependent agent permanent establishment under paragraph 6 of Article 5. This is a requirement for the United Kingdom.

5.56 Paragraph 6 clarifies that investment managers will not be considered to be "closely related" to the investment funds they manage under the provisions of paragraph 9 of Article 5 unless they are entitled to more than 20% of the fund's profits for the taxable period. This is a requirement for the United Kingdom.

5.57 Paragraph 7 stipulates that deductibility of expenses for calculating the taxable profit of a permanent establishment must be done according to the laws of the territory where the permanent establishment is situated, subject to the provisions of Article 23 (Non-Discrimination).

5.58 Paragraph 8 provides the United Kingdom with a 'most favoured nation' clause in respect to the rates of source taxation on passive income (dividends, interest and royalties). If Peru agrees lower rates than are contained in the 2025 Arrangements, or an exemption not provided for, then Peru must immediately inform the United Kingdom, and the United Kingdom may then request a renegotiation to incorporate these provisions into the convention.

5.59 Paragraph 9 ensures that paragraph 3 of Article 23 (Non-Discrimination) does not prevent Peru from applying a domestic provision restricting in certain circumstances deductions allowed by banks and financial companies.

5.60 Paragraph 10 ensures that taxpayers who are subject to certain tax stabilisation measures under Peruvian law will continue to pay tax at the rates stipulated in those contracts notwithstanding the provisions of the convention.

5.61 Paragraph 11 stipulates that any dispute that falls within the scope of the convention can only be referred to the Council for Trade in Services under the General Agreement on Trade in Services following the express agreement of both the United Kingdom and Peru.

6. Legislative and Legal Context

How has the law changed?

6.1 This instrument brings into effect the provisions of the 2025 Arrangements.

Why was this approach taken to change the law?

6.2 This is the only possible approach to make the necessary changes.

7. Consultation

Summary of consultation outcome and methodology

7.1 The 2025 Arrangements were published on the GOV.UK website on 21 March 2025 and a written ministerial statement to that effect was made on 27 March 2025. A consultation on the 2025 Arrangements was not undertaken as they were the product of bilateral negotiations with Peru that dealt with a wide range of complex issues not suitable for open negotiation. However, HMRC regularly consults with external interested parties, including business representatives, about the United Kingdom's network of DTCs.

8. Applicable Guidance

8.1 General guidance on the operation of the United Kingdom's double taxation conventions can be found on the HMRC pages of the gov.uk website[1] and in the Double Taxation Relief Manual[2].

8.2 This Manual will be updated once the 2025 Arrangements enter into force, which will be after Peru also completes its ratification of the 2025 Arrangements.

Part Two: Impact and the Better Regulation Framework

9. Impact Assessment

9.1 A Tax Information and Impact Note has not been prepared for this instrument because it gives effect to a DTC.

9.2 As with all DTCs, this DTC does not introduce new tax burdens. Rather, it provides relief from tax. Taxpayers may have to make a claim to HMRC or the fiscal authority of Peru in order to benefit from the Arrangements.

Impact on businesses, charities and voluntary bodies

9.3 There is no, or no significant, impact on business, charities or voluntary bodies because apart from one-off costs of familiarisation with the benefits of the DTC there are not expected to be further costs.

9.4 The legislation does impact small or micro businesses but as with other businesses, the impact is negligible and no special approach for small or micro businesses is necessary.

9.5 There is no, or no significant, impact on the public sector because apart from one-off costs of introducing the DTC any further costs of administration would be minimal.

10. Monitoring and review

What is the approach to monitoring and reviewing this legislation?

10.1 The approach to monitoring this legislation is that DTCs are kept under regular informal review through communication with affected taxpayer groups and other stakeholders, and this measure will be monitored as part of that process.

10.2 The instrument does not include a statutory review clause.

Part Three: Statements and Matters of Particular Interest to Parliament

11. Matters of special interest to Parliament

11.1 None.

12. European Convention on Human Rights

12.1 The Exchequer Secretary to the Treasury has made the following statement regarding Human Rights:

"In my view the provisions of the Double Taxation Relief and International Tax Enforcement (Peru) Order 2025 are compatible with the Convention rights."

13. The Relevant European Union Acts

13.1 This instrument is not made under the European Union (Withdrawal) Act 2018, the European Union (Future Relationship) Act 2020 or the Retained EU Law (Revocation and Reform) Act 2023 ("relevant European Union Acts").
