The votes of the delegacy and the committee on any matter brought before a meeting of the delegacy and committee in common session shall be taken and recorded separately except in the case of matters which are expressly referred to them under the provisions in that behalf hereinafter contained for determination in common session by a majority of those present and voting.

35. No decision arrived at shall (except in the case of matters which are expressly referred to them under the provisions in that behalf hereinafter contained for determination in common session by a majority of those present and voting) be binding on either the delegacy or the committee unless the meeting is attended by the number of members of the delegacy and committee respectively required to form a quorum at the meetings of such delegacy and committee when separately held or unless such decision is arrived at by the votes of a majority of the members of as well the delegacy as the committee respectively present and voting.

36. In the event of a quorum of one or both bodies not being formed the meeting may with the consent of the majority of those present proceed to the discussion of business but the results arrived at if any shall not be valid till they have been submitted either in separate or common session to the delegacy or committee of which a quorum was not present.

37. The consideration of any matter other than a matter which—

(A) Is referred to them by statute or regulation for discussion at such meetings; or

(B) The senate and the council have directed to be considered at such meetings;

may be adjourned or withdrawn from the meeting in common session by a vote of either the delegacy or the committee.

38. The above regulations notwithstanding the senate and the council may agree and in that event direct that the decision of any matter which they have directed shall be considered by the delegacy and the committee in common session shall be determined by the majority of those present and voting and may appoint a quorum for such joint meeting.

Meetings of the Professorial Boards in Common Session.

39. Meetings of the professorial boards may be held in common session under and in accordance with statutes to be made by the commissioners identical as nearly as may be with those for the meetings of the delegacy and the theological committee in common session but with the substitution therein of the delegacy for the senate the theological committee for the council the professorial board of University of London King's College for the delegacy and the professorial board of the theological department for the theological committee and with all other necessary alterations and with the omission therefrom of all reference to the appointment of the secretary of the college or of the office or library staffs.

Time-Table.

40. The senate and the council shall direct the delegacy and the theological committee respectively to arrange the time-table of classes and other regulations for the instruction of the students in concert and subject to the conditions following (that is to say):—

(1) That no student shall be prevented by such arrangements from attending a daily service in the college chapel and a weekly lecture in theology if he so desire:

(2) That no student other than those studying exclusively in the theological department shall be compelled to attend such service or lecture or be subject to any disability on account of his religious belief:

(3) That every reasonable facility shall be given to students to attend courses of study approved by the senate for internal students and comprising classes held both in the theological and in other faculties.

Fellows of King's College.

41. The senate (after receiving a report from the delegacy) may appoint persons as fellows of the college and the council (in respect of distinction in theology) may elect persons as fellows of the college but the appointment by the senate of any person as a fellow of the college shall not of itself entitle him to be a member of the corporation of the college.

For the purpose of electing fellows in respect of distinction in theology the council shall retain all their powers of electing fellows existing immediately before the appointed day but save as aforesaid all such powers shall as from the appointed day be extinguished.

Associates of the College.

42. The council may elect as associates of the college—
