EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This Note is not part of the Regulations, but is intended to indicate their general purport.)

The River Boards Act, 1948, which establishes river boards to carry out certain functions including land drainage, applies to river boards many of the provisions of the Land Drainage Act, 1930. These Regulations made under the Land Drainage Act, 1930, (which enact in respect of river boards similar provision to those in Land Drainage (General) Regulations, 1932, relating to catchment boards) prescribe the notices to be given when a river board propose to commute an obligation imposed on any person to do any work, or to enter into an arrangement with a navigation or conservancy authority; they also prescribe the interests which shall be sufficient to enable persons to present a memorial that certain Orders made under the Land Drainage Act, 1930, shall not become law without confirmation by Parliament.

EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This Note is not part of the Order, but is intended to indicate its general purport.)

This Order puts charges on registered land accompanying transfers for value on the same footing, for the purpose of fees, as charges accompanying applications for first registration. Under the Land Registration Fee Order, 1930, no fee is payable for registration in the latter case, but in the case of charges accompanying transfers for value the fee ordinarily payable on registration of a charge is abated by only one half. After the 1st October, 1950, no fee will be payable for the registration of such charges.

Where a charge to secure further advances accompanies a transfer for value, an abatement of one half is also made on noting such advances, but there is no abatement if the charge accompanied an application for first registration. This will be the general rule in future except in the case of further advances made under a charge registered before the 1st October, 1950, which was entitled to the benefit of the abatement.
