16th May, 1939, the Local Government and other Officers' Superannuation Act, 1922, applied). These regulations, which supersede the Local Government Superannuation (Reduction and Adjustment of Superannuation Allowance) (Scotland) Regulations, 1939, in general limit the superannuation allowance payable in such circumstances to an amount not exceeding the difference between the emoluments of the pensioner's new employment and the remuneration which he received in the employment in respect of which he was pensioned. Where, however, the pensioner's new employment replaces a local government employment previously held by him concurrently with the pensioned employment and in respect of which he has not been pensioned his superannuation allowance is not to be reduced by reason of the new employment unless he spends materially more time in the new employment than in the old concurrent employment. If he does spend materially more time in the new employment than in the old concurrent employment his superannuation allowance is to be reduced only to the extent by which the aggregate of the superannuation allowance and the emoluments of his new employment in any period exceeds the aggregate of the remuneration of the pensioned employment and the emoluments of the former concurrent employment for a comparable period.

The regulations also prescribe the superannuation rights to which the employee is to be entitled on ceasing to hold his new employment. Service in the pensioned employment is made reckonable for the purpose of ascertaining whether the employee is qualified to receive any benefit in respect of his new employment, and if he is so qualified he is given the right to choose (except in the circumstances specified in the proviso to regulation 5 (1)) either a combined benefit in respect of both employments or a separate benefit in respect of his new employment. Detailed provisions concerning the benefits payable are contained in regulations 5 to 10.

Regulation 11 limits the service reckonable for the purpose of calculating a benefit payable under the regulations.

(a) 1 Edw. 8 & 1 Geo. 6. c. 68.

Provided that—

(a) an employee shall not surrender—

(i) any such part as would make the amount of the reduced annual allowance payable to him, or which would be payable to him if he were to retire from his employment immediately after the surrender is allowed by the appropriate administering authority, less than the amount of the pension which might become payable under these rules to the beneficiary ;

(ii) a smaller part than would secure for the beneficiary a pension of twenty-six pounds per annum ; or

(iii) any part which is not an exact number of pounds ;

(b) subject as aforesaid an employee in the calculation of whose annual allowance account is taken (or would be taken if he were to retire from his employment immediately after the surrender) of such service under the Teachers Acts as is mentioned in subsection (1) of section 17 of the Act of 1937, shall not surrender a larger part than one-third of the annual allowance, after deduction therefrom of any annual sum which by virtue of that subsection and any regulations for the time being in force thereunder will be required to be deducted from the amount receivable in any year in respect of the annual allowance.

(2) The amount of pension payable in return for each one pound of an annual allowance surrendered by an employee shall be the amount, based on the age and sex of the employee and the age and sex of the beneficiary, which according to the tables in force at the date at which the surrender is allowed by the local authority concerned will be the actuarial equivalent at the date when the employee ceases to hold his employment of each one pound of the surrendered part of the annual allowance.

Information to be supplied to employees eligible to make a surrender

3.—(1) The appropriate administering authority shall send at the times and to the persons specified in paragraph (2) of this rule a notice stating that provision has been made by these rules for the surrender of part of a superannuation allowance to a spouse or dependant and informing the person to whom the notice is addressed that he may on application to the authority obtain further information on the subject.

(2) The notice to which the last preceding paragraph refers shall be sent to every contributory employee:—

(a) forthwith on the coming into operation of these rules if at the date of the coming into operation of these rules he is entitled, subject to the provisions of these rules, to make a surrender thereunder or if, so far as can be ascertained, he will be so entitled within a period of three months after that date ;

(b) not less than three months before the date at which he will, if he lives, reach pensionable age ;

(c) forthwith on—

(i) his giving notice of retirement ; or

(ii) his being given notice to terminate his employment ; or

(iii) his ceasing to be employed without any such notice having been given, in circumstances in which he will become entitled to an annual allowance, unless within the preceding three months a notice has been sent to him under this paragraph.

(3) The appropriate administering authority shall forthwith on receipt of an application made pursuant to this rule send to the applicant the following documents namely, a copy of these rules and the tables for the time being in force, the provisional estimate referred to in paragraph (4) of this rule, and two copies of the prescribed form.

(4) The provisional estimate referred to in paragraph (3) of this rule is, in the case of a retiring employee, a provisional estimate of the amount of the annual allowance to which he has become or will become entitled, and in any other case the amount of the annual allowance to which he would become entitled if he were to retire three months after the date on which the estimate is given.

Notification of desire to make a surrender

4.—(1) Where a retiring employee wishes to make a surrender he may, not more than two months before or within one month after the date on which he ceases to be employed, notify his desire to surrender a part of an annual allowance to which he may become or has become entitled by completing a copy of the prescribed form and sending it to the appropriate administering authority:

Provided that where the appropriate administering authority are satisfied that owing to circumstances beyond the control of the employee it has not been reasonably practicable for him to notify his desire to surrender a part of an annual allowance within the time limit imposed by the preceding provisions of this paragraph, they may at their discretion extend that limit to a date not more than six months after the date on which he ceases to be employed.

(2) An eligible employee other than a retiring employee who wishes to make a surrender may within two months before or at any time after becoming an eligible employee and while he is still employed notify his desire to surrender a part of an annual allowance to which he may become entitled by completing and despatching, in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (1) of this rule, a copy of the prescribed form.

(3) If at the date of receipt by the appropriate administering authority of any such notification as aforesaid there are in force tables different from those which were furnished to the employee under rule 3 of these rules the authority shall forthwith furnish him with a copy of the tables in force for the time being.

Action to be taken prior to administering authority's decision in regard to notification

5. On receipt from a contributory employee of a notification under the last preceding rule the appropriate administering authority shall—

(a) if they are not the employing authority, obtain from the employing authority a record of all the occasions on which the employee has been absent from duty owing to ill-health (indicating in cases of absence for periods or seven or more consecutive days the nature of the illness) during the five years immediately preceding the date on which the notification was received by the appropriate administering authority or, if the employee has retired from his employment, during the five years immediately preceding the date of his retirement;

(b) forthwith arrange for the employee to be examined by a registered medical practitioner nominated by them and for a report to be given to them by the practitioner stating whether, in his opinion, the employee is in good health, regard being had to the age of the employee, and if the opinion stated in such report is that the employee is not in good health the appropriate administering authority shall notify him accordingly and offer him an opportunity of a further examination by some other registered medical practitioner nominated by them with a view to that practitioner reporting to them on the state of health of the employee;

(c) require the employee to furnish at his own expense—

(i) a certificate of his birth, except where the date of birth has been duly recorded by the authority and is not disputed;

(ii) in respect of a beneficiary who is the employee's spouse a birth certificate and a marriage certificate;

(iii) in respect of a beneficiary who is a dependant other than the employee's spouse a birth certificate and such evidence as may be appropriate to prove dependency;

and any other information or evidence which the authority consider necessary:

Provided that if for any reason a birth or marriage certificate cannot be supplied the authority may accept such other evidence of birth or marriage as they think fit in order to determine the question of marriage or the age of the person concerned as the case may be.

Fees for medical examination

6. Any fee payable to a practitioner in respect of an examination and report under the last preceding rule shall be paid, at the time of the examination, by the employee.

Decision of administering authority in regard to notification

7.—(1) Subject to the provisions of these rules, unless the appropriate administering authority are of opinion, on consideration of a report obtained by them under rule 5 of these rules, that the employee to whom the report relates is not in good health or they are of opinion that the evidence produced in regard to marriage or dependency is not satisfactory, they shall allow the surrender of such part of the annual allowance as is specified in the employee's notification and as is in conformity with these rules and shall grant to the beneficiary named in the notification a pension, payable in the event of the beneficiary's surviving the employee and to be calculated in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (2) of rule 2 of these rules:

Provided that a decision by an appropriate administering authority to allow a surrender by a retiring employee shall not be made before the date on which he ceases to be employed, and a decision by an appropriate administering authority to allow a surrender by an eligible employee other than a retiring employee shall not be made before the date on which he becomes such an employee.

(2) Notwithstanding anything in the last preceding paragraph, the appropriate administering authority shall, if they are dissatisfied with the evidence of marriage, but are nevertheless satisfied on the evidence already before them or after making such further enquiries as they think necessary that a person named as spouse in the notification given by the employee is a dependant of the employee, treat the notification as if the person named therein as spouse had been named as a dependant of the employee.

(3) As soon as practicable after coming to a decision in regard to a notification given by an employee, the appropriate administering authority shall notify the employee that they have allowed a surrender in favour of the person named in his notification or that they have decided not to allow a surrender of any part of the annual allowance, as the case may be.

(4) Where the appropriate administering authority have allowed a surrender they shall in addition to furnishing the employee with the notification required by the last preceding paragraph furnish him with a statement as to the amount of the pension to which the beneficiary may become entitled after the death of the employee and, if the employee is a retiring employee, with a statement as to the amount of the reduced annual allowance to which the employee is entitled.

(5) A notification of a decision not to allow a surrender shall state the grounds for the decision.

(6) For the purposes of these rules a notification sent to an employee in pursuance of paragraph (3) of this rule shall, if it has been posted in a prepaid envelope addressed to the employee by the appropriate administering authority, be deemed to have been received by the employee at the time at which a letter would be delivered in the ordinary course of post.

Cancellation or amendment of notification

8. A contributory employee who has given a notification of a surrender under these rules may cancel or amend the notification by a notice in writing addressed to the appropriate administering authority and posted in a prepaid envelope to or left with the clerk to the authority at any time before the employee has received notification from the authority that his surrender has been allowed.

Validity and operation of notification

9.—(1) A notification by an employee shall become null and void if—

(a) the beneficiary dies before the employee receives notification from the appropriate administering authority that his surrender has been allowed; or

(b) the employee dies at any time before midnight on the day on which the appropriate administering authority decide to allow the surrender.

(2) Subject as aforesaid a surrender allowed in pursuance of a notification given by an employee shall have effect as from the date on which the employee ceases to hold his employment.

Surrender by an eligible employee of an additional part of an annual allowance

10. An eligible employee who has already made a surrender may thereafter surrender, subject to the provisions of these rules, a further part or parts of any annual allowance to which he may become entitled:

Provided that the aggregate of the parts surrendered shall conform with the limits imposed by rule 2 of these rules on the surrender of a single part of an annual allowance.

Application to clerk of the peace and county council

11.—(1) Subject as hereinafter provided these rules shall have effect in relation to a person to whom section 24 of the Act of 1953 applies and to a superannuation allowance to which such a person becomes entitled (or to which he would become entitled if he were to retire from his employment) under paragraph (b) of subsection (2) of section 9 of the Local Government (Clerks) Act, 1931(a), or to any similar allowance by way of annual amounts under regulations made under section 24 of the Act of 1953 as they have effect in relation to a contributory employee and an annual allowance under the superannuation regulations.

(2) In relation to such a person and to the superannuation allowance or annual allowance to which he so becomes entitled these rules shall have effect subject to the modification that references to a contributory employee or an employee shall be construed as references to that person and references to the appropriate administering authority or the administering authority shall be construed as references to the county council responsible for payment of his superannuation allowance or annual allowance.

(a) 21 & 22 Geo. 5. c. 45.

EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This Note is not part of the Rules, but is intended to indicate their general purport.)

These rules enable a contributory employee to surrender, in the circumstances and subject to the conditions stated in the rules, part of a superannuation allowance in exchange for the grant of a pension to a spouse or other named dependant of the employee. A pension so granted will be calculated by reference to tables prepared by the Government Actuary and will be payable to the beneficiary during the period for which the beneficiary survives the employee. A surrender may be made under the rules by a contributory employee who on ceasing to hold his employment, becomes entitled to an allowance under Part 1 of the Local Government Superannuation Act, 1937, or an annual allowance under superannuation regulations made under section 1 of the Local Government Superannuation Act, 1953. A surrender may also be made by a contributory employee who would be entitled to such an allowance if he were to retire. In either case not more than one-third of the allowance may be surrendered, and the amount surrendered must not produce a pension of less than £26 or make the employee's own allowance (reduced in consequence of the surrender) less than the pension which may become payable to the beneficiary. The local authority administering the appropriate superannuation fund must allow a surrender made in conformity with the rules unless they are of opinion, after considering a medical report, that the employee is not in good health, or that evidence of marriage or dependancy of the beneficiary is unsatisfactory.

The rules specify the times within which an employee may notify his wish to make a surrender or to cancel or amend his notification, and they also provide for the circumstances in which, owing to death of the beneficiary or the employee, a notification of a wish to make a surrender becomes void.

The rules apply with necessary modifications to those clerks of the peace and county council who are superannuable under section 9 of the Local Government (Clerks) Act, 1931, or who elect to receive, under section 24 of the Local Government Superannuation Act, 1953, alternative benefits in place of those under section 9 of the Act of 1931.
