EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This Note is not part of the Regulations, but is intended to indicate their general purport.)

These regulations provide for the amendment of the National Health Service (Superannuation) Regulations, 1955, in their application to persons employed at the Yarmouth Naval Hospital who enter the service of a Regional Hospital Board when, under the Yarmouth Naval Hospital Transfer Act, 1957, the Hospital becomes vested in the Minister of Health.

An established civil servant who enters the employment of a Board in those circumstances will be subject to the National Health Service (Superannuation) Regulations and will be able to reckon for pension purposes all previous pensionable service as a civil servant. He may, however, exercise an option to remain subject to the conditions and enjoy the benefits of the Superannuation Acts relating to civil servants instead of those of the Regulations.

Unestablished civil servants are enabled to reckon their service as a civil servant for the purpose of determining their eligibility for benefits under the Regulations.

The regulations also amend regulation 58 of the National Health Service (Superannuation) Regulations, 1955, to provide that former established civil servants at Ministry of Pensions hospitals and at the Yarmouth Naval Hospital should, in the National Health Service, (a) remain pensionable if without any break of service they became part-time employees, and (b) be able to reckon certain previous non-pensionable service for the purpose of determining their eligibility for benefits under the Regulations.
