EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This Note is not part of the Regulations, but is intended to indicate their general purport.)

Under certain provisions of the National Insurance Act, 1946, and the National Insurance (Industrial Injuries) Act, 1946, liability to pay contributions in respect of employed contributor's employment or insurable employment, as the case may be, does not arise for any week in which no services are rendered and no remuneration is paid.

These Regulations provide that for the purposes of those provisions of those Acts, remuneration in respect of any week which does not exceed forty shillings shall be deemed not to be remuneration. They also increase to forty shillings the limit under which holiday payments are not deemed to be remuneration for those purposes.

The preliminary draft of these Regulations (described on its publication as the preliminary draft of the National Insurance and Industrial Injuries (Collection of Contributions) Amendment Regulations, 1958), was submitted to the National Insurance Advisory Committee in accordance with section 77 of the National Insurance Act, 1946, and their report thereon dated the 28th November, 1958, is contained in the House of Commons Paper No. 74 (Session 1958–59) published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office.
