EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This Note is not part of the Regulations, but is intended to indicate their general purport.)

Regulation 41 of the School Premises (Standards and General Requirements) (Scotland) Regulations, 1959, divides the total building costs of new schools and of extensions of existing schools into "common costs" and "special costs". "Common costs" are defined in such a way as to include the cost of all building and civil engineering operations which are common to all such buildings. The Regulation provides that the common costs of any building shall not exceed £3.6s. per sq. ft. of the total area, save in cases in which the Secretary of State is satisfied that exceptional circumstances exist which justify a higher figure. The purpose of these Regulations is to increase the figure of £3.6s. to £3.10s.
