EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This Note is not part of the Order.)

Subject to certain conditions, section 46 of the Superannuation Act 1949 permits the payment of a children's pension to continue after age 16 if the child is undergoing training for a trade, profession or vocation. One of the conditions is that the emoluments received during training, excluding the return of any premiums, do not exceed £13 a year. The same condition is attached to children's pensions under the Administration of Justice (Pensions) Act 1950.

This Order increases the limit on emoluments under these two Acts from £13 to £104 a year.
