EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This note is not part of the order.)

The Guildford Godalming and District Water Board were, by two orders made in 1958 and 1961 under the Water Act 1945 (c.42), authorised to construct and take water from boreholes on land at Gomshall in Surrey.

The orders limited the amounts of water to be taken from the borehole authorised by the first order to 300,000 gallons per day and the total to be taken from all the relevant boreholes to 1,000,000 gallons per day. These limits are now inconsistent with a licence granted under the Water Resources Act 1963 to the Thames Water Authority (the successor to the Board) to abstract up to 1,250,000 gallons per day from the boreholes without limit as to the amount that can be taken from any particular borehole.

This order repeals those provisions of the orders that are inconsistent with the licence.
