Explanatory Notes.

1. When you are given this notice, it is your duty to attend for further medical examination and treatment until you are certified free from venereal disease in a communicable form. You must follow carefully the directions given to you by the special practitioner.

2. At any time during your course of examination or treatment you are free to change the special practitioner you attend—for example, if you go to live at another address. If you do this, it is your duty under Regulation 33B—

(a) to send to the special practitioner you have been attending a transfer notice, stating your intention to attend another special practitioner whose name and address must be stated;

(b) if you are changing your own address, to state your new address;

(c) to attend the new special practitioner named in the transfer notice within seven days of giving the notice; and

(d) to follow the directions given to you by the special practitioner named in the transfer notice.

3. When he is satisfied that you are free from venereal disease in a communicable form, the special practitioner whom you are attending will give you a certificate, which you must send to the Medical Superintendent Officer of Health of the County Borough or the designated Medical Officer of Health of the County in which you are then living. You will then no longer be required to attend a special practitioner for examination or treatment.

4. All information obtained in connection with your examination or treatment is regarded as strictly confidential by all concerned.

5. The maximum penalties for failing to comply with any requirements of Regulation 33B are, on summary conviction, three months' imprisonment or a fine of £100, or both imprisonment and fine.
